

THE PENALTY FOR NEGLECT

REGIONIAN LAYS IT ON TO HARRIMAN SYSTEM

Central Oregon's Immense Possibilities Are Still Awaiting The Advent of His Promised Railroad Line.

Like a ghost from the long-dead past, the Central Oregon railroad proposition stalked into the Interstate Commerce proceedings in this city Thursday. It has been, like many other specters, to plague the Harriman system for its neglect of a state to which it owes much. During the years immediately following the period of hard times which so seriously affected the railroads Oregon remained patient and passive while the railroads were recuperating from the crisis through which they had passed. With the return of enormous dividends, however, came demand for increased transportation facilities in the state. The northern Pacific, which had but recently taken over the Hunt road and cut Portland out of the richest portion of Walla Walla and Umatilla Counties, then proceeds to invade the Idaho field, and by construction of the Clearwater branches and tributary to Puget Sound an enormous area of the richest farming land in the Pacific Northwest. Settlers flocked into the newly opened country, and cities and towns grew and flourished in an amazingly brief period. But in Oregon there was no railroad building. Long wagon trains, carrying wool and pelts from Southeastern Oregon, still make that 200-mile trek across the state to reach a shipping station. There were thousands of square miles of rich farming land which awaited only the coming of transportation facilities to make it the equal in value of any in the state. With such prospects it is not to be wondered at that settlers rushed in by the thousands, firmly imbued with the belief that such a rich country could not long be ignored by the roads which were then taking such heavy toll out of Oregon. Then came Mr. Harriman and he listened to the glowing reports of those who had visited the Central Oregon country. He learned with apparent pleasure that out of that rich and neglected land annually came some wool and livestock than is produced in any similarly neglected locality in the United States. He also learned that there were "pioneer" of almost illimitable extent which would supply a railroad with enormous traffic for generations after the present railroad managers had passed on, and that between these vast reserves and immense areas of grazing lands were rich valleys greater in extent and richness than some of the entire east of the Mississippi. All this traffic was tangible and real, and in addition there were possibilities of immense business on the lands then being prepared for irrigation. But for some reason that has never been satisfactorily explained to Oregonians, the construction of this road has been held up. Not only has Mr. Harriman failed to build into the isolated region of riches, but in securing the Columbia Southern Railroad he has actually prevented any other line from going in. Prior to construction of the Columbia Southern the possibilities for development in central Oregon were somewhat vaguely understood, but when it had been demonstrated with the Columbia Southern, which most of the railroad men termed "Lyt's folly," that the country was susceptible of producing an enormous surplus, there was no longer any doubt as to the necessity for a road through the Central part of the state.

THE SECRET OF IT.

For some time the Tribune has marveled at the stand taken by the woolgrowers at their association meetings. This was particularly true a year ago, when the association passed resolutions sustaining the forest reserve policy of the national administration. Prior to the meeting of the association, we had talked to a great many sheepmen, and with one accord, they opposed the present forest reserve policy. When they met at their state meeting they adopted resolutions in favor of the policy. We could not understand this, as our experience with the sheep men of Idaho has convinced us that they are a straightforward, honest class of men. The recent meeting at Boise has brought to light the endless chain that Chief Forester Pinchot has been working. A forest reserve is created, and in accordance with the policy of the chief forester grazing privileges, or rather rights, were given to sheepmen, making the proper application. Then sheep men would have the forest reserves reserved for their special use. They would graze on the public lands outside of the reserves until the pastures were exhausted and then retire with their sheep to the reserves. As the reserves cut off a great part of the public domain, other sheepmen were crowded out. The man with the forest reserve permit had a cinch. In self-defense the non-forest reserve sheepmen were compelled to seek permission to graze in the forest reserves. As the forest reserves were all taken up, new ones must be created in order to permit the sheepmen to have forest reserve pastures. To get the reserve, petitions were necessary, and of course the sheepmen signed them, thus placing themselves on record as in favor of the policy of the administration. These petitions became evidence in favor of that policy, and when it came to the meeting of the Woolgrowers' association, what could the sheepman do? There was his name signed to a petition asking for more reserves. If he condemned the reserves, people would naturally ask, why do you ask for more of them? and what could he say? The Tribune is glad to note that there were enough sheepmen who were not tied up to condemn the policy at the recent meeting at Boise. In the next issue of the Tribune a more complete analysis of the forest reserve policy and its effect on sheepmen will be made.—Caldwell Tribune.

J. D. JENKINS

News has just been received from London, that J. D. Jenkins, died on Nov. 25, 1906, aged 49 years, from cancer of the stomach. The deceased was well known in Malheur county, being engaged in the sheep business in this section for many years. "Jen" as he was called by his many friends was a good soul in all respects, and his summons to the Great Beyond in the prime of life is regretted by a large circle of acquaintances. May his sleep be sweet.—Argus.

DRY FARMING BY UNCLE SAM

NOVEL WORK AT THE EXPERIMENT STATION, CHEYENNE.

Great Crops Produced on What Was Once Regarded as an Unproductive Desert The In Semi-Arid Region.

While public attention has been directed to the mammoth irrigation enterprises being carried on by the United States Government in various parts of the west little is known of experiments now being carried on in the semi-arid region, which, if successful, will go a long way toward redeeming a vast empire which has hitherto been looked upon as an unproductive desert. The government has an experiment station at Cheyenne, Wyo., where work has been carried on for two years with most encouraging results. The station is most admirably situated. Cheyenne being in what is known as the semi-arid region, extending several hundred miles eastward from the base of the Rocky Mountains. This vast sweep of plain, which extends from the Gulf to the Canadian line has, until the last five years, been looked upon as a desert waste, fit for nothing but grazing. It was a part of the country that was put down on the early school maps as the "great American desert," and such it has been regarded until recent events proved it can be successfully farmed.

All these lands, which a few years ago were comparatively worthless, have been jumped anywhere from ten to 50 fold in value in the last few years. The so-called Campbell process of dry farming has done the most to bring about this revolution in prices. Ranch houses are dotting the once barren landscape, and wheat fields wave in the breeze where once only the sagebrush and dry buffalo grass met the eye. Not alone is dry farming being practiced successfully, but it has been demonstrated that windmill irrigation can be carried on, as water has been struck with little digging, and in some localities, fine artesian wells are flowing.

The government has been awake to all these changes. It is the policy of the Agricultural Department to investigate anything that looks as if it might increase the agricultural resources of the country, and this policy has held true in the case of dry farming. The experiment station was located at Cheyenne, because here conditions are typical of the average conditions on the semi-arid plains. The rain fall is something over 12 inches, and the snow fall is quite heavy. The winter climate is not severe, and the summers are characteristic of the plains—fierce hot in the daytime, but cool at night.

When sod was broken on the virgin prairie, there were many to prophesy that no crops would be raised at the experiment station. But several hundred acres were planted in variegated crops, and the general results have been surprising. Various kinds of farming and windmill irrigation.

Dry farming proper is simply a conservation of the moisture in the soil. It is by no means a new discovery, though it is called the Campbell process, through a few new features which were added by H. W. Campbell, whose practical work yielded the first real result in the West. It is said the ancient Egyptians practiced dry farming, having discovered the secret that if the earth is kept constantly broken and pulverized there is little chance for the moisture to escape. If left to bake hard the moisture of winter and early spring will soon evaporate from the earth, but if the soil is kept crumbled it will retain dampness until far into the summer, without need of irrigation. By following this simple rule, the government has produced great crops at the Cheyenne experiment station with no other aid than the natural rainfall of the plains.

To the uninitiated, dry farming looks like a hopeless task at the start. All around is a barren, rolling prairie, covered with sagebrush and cactus and dry grass. These were the favorite roaming grounds of the buffaloes in early days, but no man at that time imagined that ranches would dot the vast prairie sea. Nor was any such thing imagined by the emigrants who came later and left the bones of their stock on the parched plains—nor by the first who traveled over the stage routes to Denver.

But, when the virgin prairie has been turned over by the great steam plow and the top soil has been pulverized, and the crops sown, there is a different story to tell. Soon the first green of the crop begins to show. The scientific farmer keeps the soil well crumbled, not giving it a chance to bake in the hot sun. There is no rain, and each day the sky is cloudless. But the soil remains moist, and the crop continues to shoot from the ground. Then it yellows, and at harvest there is a crop that well repays the efforts of the farmer. If there have been a few showers, so much the better—but even without these aids it is possible to grow good crops, provided the rainfall and snowfall of early Spring have been normal.

The Government has secured not less wonderful results from windmill irrigation on the experiment farm at Cheyenne. Irrigated crop do not need more than two irrigations in a season. One irrigation at precisely the right time, will often save a crop. Consequently the farmer who has a well with a good flow of water is doubly safeguarded. It is possible for him to make a small reservoir in to which he can pump water from his well. This water can be turned on his crops in July and August, and he will not need to keep his soil so thoroughly pulverized as if he were doing strictly dry farming. With the use of denatured alcohol in this country, in place of gasoline, it is anticipated that small pumps will take the place of windmills in many instances on the plains. Thus the farmer will not be at the caprice of winds, but will have a constant flow of water for irrigating purposes.

The first report of the government experiment station on the plains has yet to be made. It is announced that one will be issued this spring. But there is no doubt as to the practical success of the experiments in these new kinds of farming. The crops that have been raised on the Cheyenne experiment farm need little supplementary explanation. They prove that there is no longer any "great American desert" and that the plains which were once dreaded by emigrants will soon become thickly populated with a prosperous farming community.—Oregonian.

Competition is Thing of Past

The Telegram says: Probably the strongest testimony introduced at yesterday afternoon's hearing of the Interstate Commerce Commission was that given by J. N. Teal, a local attorney, who also acts in a legal capacity for the transportation committee of the Chamber of Commerce and compiles the reports of that body. Mr. Teal was called with reference to reports issued in July, 1905, and December, 1905. Attorney Severance offered the reports in evidence, referring to them as exhibits 2 and 3.

Mr. Teal admitted the authorship of the statements and said he secured information regarding railroads, cost of construction, earnings and other data from official sources and reports of the Interstate Commerce Commission. He said he didn't think it necessary to name what official sources he had referred to.

"You describe the character of the country lying to the south of the O. R. & N. Where did you get that?" asked Attorney Severance. "From living there and from reliable sources, and I believe that since the report was issued more could have been said of the conditions," replied Mr. Teal.

"Do you know of any other territory in the West equal in extent and richness to Central Oregon, which is without railroad advantages?" asked Mr. Severance.

"No, I do not," replied Mr. Teal. "The Southeastern Oregon country contains 40,000 square miles and has counties of 10,000 square miles. It has valleys you could see Rhode Island in, and if that part of the state had been developed Oregon would have a population of from 1,000,000 to 1,500,000. Washington, which is one-third smaller than Oregon, developed faster. Why the state was not developed by the construction of branch lines is a question I can't answer."

MUST EXAMINE THE LAND

ROOSEVELT ISSUES ORDER TO PREVENT FRAUDS.

No Patent to Issue Until Claim is Inspected Except in Certain Specified Cases—More Special Agents.

A recent Washington dispatch says: President Roosevelt has determined to put an end if possible, to frauds in the acquisition of public lands by individuals and corporations. He has directed that hereafter no patent shall be issued to public lands until an examination of the ground shall have been made by an authorized officer of the government. The President's order is in the form of a letter to Secretary Hitchcock, and under its provisions orders are being sent out today to officials of the General Land Office. Following is the letter:

"The secretary of the Interior—To prevent the fraud now practiced in the acquisition of public lands of the United States, I have directed that hereafter no final certificate, patent, or other evidence of title shall be issued under the public land laws until an actual examination has been made upon the ground for or by an authorized officer of the Government, but the following shall be excepted from the force of this order:

"First—All claims which have heretofore been, examined upon the ground by an authorized officer of the Government whose report is found satisfactory.

"Second—All claims where an officer of the Government other than those authorized to take final proof, shall have been present at the taking of final proof to cross-examine claimant and witnesses, if such proof is found satisfactory.

"Third—All claims where claimant's compliance with law has been established by contest or other regular proceedings.

"Fourth—Entries which may have been confirmed by virtue of any act of Congress.

"Fifth—Selection and entries in which no residence or improvement is required by law, when the lands embraced are in agricultural districts, or when character has been fixed by investigation and classification made in accordance with law.

"Sixth—Cases of relinquishment of patents because of some clerical error occurring in the patent heretofore issued.

"Seventh—All Indian allotments which have been regularly approved in accordance with instructions of the Secretary of the Interior.

"You will issue all necessary instructions to carry this order into effect.

This order is in lieu of my order of December 13, 1903, 1903.
